This statement provides you with a general indication of how you performed against the criteria for each topic on this occasion.

This is not a certificate.

There are five feedback descriptors. Each feedback descriptor covers a range of marks. Each descriptor also provides an indication of how you have performed in relation to the minimum requirement needed to demonstrate competence in that task, and includes generic advice to you on how to proceed with your studies or continued professional development.

Exceeded: your performance exceeded the minimum requirement. Try to maintain this level of performance.

Met: your performance met the minimum requirement. To maintain or exceed this performance level you should regularly revisit the topics in this area.

Borderline: your performance was close but did not meet the minimum requirement. Further study of the topics covered by this task is still needed.

Below requirement: your performance was not strong enough to meet the minimum requirement on this occasion. Further study of the topics covered by this task is important.

Significantly below requirement: your performance fell significantly below the minimum requirement. There was little evidence of learning. Significant further study of the topics covered by this task is essential.

For tasks worth less than ten marks, Met is the highest feedback descriptor that can be assigned.
