

Once again, for newcomers, and for any aromatic smoker who hasn't tried it....

Our own Ghostsofpompeii is always coming up with a new combination of tobacco blends. He's even into "stacking" (packing layers of different blends/flavors in one bowl).

In my humble opinion, this is his finest creation:

Mrs. Hudson's 221B Bakery Street Blend

Sherlock Holmes probably smoked a strong English blend. Naming a sweet aromatic after him would be inappropriate and ungentlemanly. The name Mrs. Hudson's is a reference to Sherlock Holmes' landlady.

Mrs. Hudson's is made from Sutliff bulk tobaccos, sold by the ounce, and blended together as follows:

Three parts (or 3 oz.) Sutliff Vanilla Custard
Two parts (or 2 oz.) Sutliff Chocolate Mousse
One part (or 1 oz.) Sutliff Crème Brulee

Some folks prefer to substitute one part (or 1 oz.) Sutliff Private Stock Molto Dolce (tin) for the very similar Creme Brûlée.

Historical note: The original recipe called for "...a pinch or two of Sutliff Irish Creme." Ghostsofpompeii says it could be omitted without harming the blend.

Mrs. Hudson's 221B Bakery Street Blend — easy to light and keep lit, great taste, smell, and room note; no bite, no goop, and no negative ghosting.
